"Shopping? Willow Creek? Us?" The children thought Mother might be kidding. The Chang family lived on a farm and hardly ever went to Willow Creek, a town forty miles away.

"Yes, we're going shopping," said Mother. "Did you forget that we're throwing a party? We will get party food and other things that we'll need. I will let you do your own shopping for gifts."

Ann chose three sweet-smelling bars of soap. Chester found some yellow slippers. Joan picked out peppermint bath oil that would be nice to soak in.

Mother got a pot roast, salad greens, cake mix, streamers, and balloons. They loaded everything up and started for home.

Ann baked a yellow cake and Chester made a bowl of white frosting. Then the children wrapped gifts and made cards.

The next day, Father's red pickup truck came slowly up the driveway. Father and Grandmother got out. They had made a long trip in the snow.
