In the Knox family there were eight daughters. Sissy Knox, at age fifteen, bossed them all around. She thought she knew just about everything!

Then came the triplets -- Peggy, Meggy, and Bessy. Peggy dressed like Meggy. Meggy dressed like Bessy. Bessy dressed like Peggy.

Doreen liked baking. She made muffins for the family. She kneaded and patted each morning. Then she baked and baked.

Myra, the sixth daughter, played drums. Neighbors held their heads every hour that Myra played. She knew how to keep a beat.

Kate had a knack for getting in scrapes. She fell from tree limbs, skinning her knees. Her clothes, hands, and face were mainly muddy.

Little Sara, number eight, was not very heavy yet. Sara crawled through the house on her knees. She gave bright smiles to each person.
