Emily packed her duffle bag. She stuffed in her nightgown and her sleeping bag. Then she added her toothbrush and zipped the bag shut.

Outside the window, the wind was whipping the snow into great heaps. The yellow lights of the snowplow flashed by on the road.

"How will we get to Gina's, Mom?" asked Emily. "I think we're going to be trapped!" The phone rang before Mom could reply.

Emily could hear Mom talking. "Oh, what a pity! But the weather really is terrible. I hope the girls can get together some other time."

"Hi, sweetie. Can I come in?" "Okay, mumbled Emily. "I'm sorry about your party. I thought we could have our own sleepover right here at home."

"We can camp in the living room and nibble on popcorn and candy," said Mom. Emily sighed.

Emily thought for a minute. Then she unzipped her duffle bag. "Last one in her nightgown is a rotten egg!"
