When Jade was a baby, she began drumming. She rapped and tapped and patted on everything.

She drummed when she was planning her day. She drummed when she was shopping. She drummed when she was sitting in the tub.

"You're bugging me with so much drumming," her sister would say. But Jade never stopped. She kept right on drumming.

When Jade and her sister rode the bus, Jade would do her drumming. It didn't matter if Jade's sister grabbed her drumsticks. Jade would just start patting her lap or tapping on the window.

When Jade grew up, she did become a very good drummer. She asked her sister to go to a show. Her sister nodded, and off they went.

Her sister did not say that Jade was bugging her with so much drumming. Instead, she clapped and bragged, "That's my sister drumming!"
